

Good afternoon,

I hope you are all having a blessed Thanksgiving.

It looks like Saturday is the best day for painting this coming weekend. There will be a workday going on at the theater from nine to four, and I will either be there or running errands for there that entire time.

In addition to simple painting there is some minor work to be done for anyone who can come with a screw gun. Richard Foster has been amazing in doing the main part of the construction for our set, but his time is limited going forward, and we still have to screw on some simple paneling and remove one wooden post.

Any volunteers who can help with these things Saturday should email productionteam@thehcpac.org. If you have already emailed that you are available to help that day, another email is unnecessary. Again, most of the painting requires virtually no skill at all; we just need to paint a bunch of stuff solid black.

Last week's update had the schedule for tech week, so I am not going to repeat that here. I do need to repeat my entreaty for spotlight operators for the show, however. These are essential to the plan for the show, and, while it is not a particularly skilled job, it is a job that requires more than two rehearsals to get down solidly, so we cannot have different people for different shows as we do not have enough rehearsals to train more than one set of operators.

We also have volunteer sign-ups for the shows themselves:

House Staff <https://www.signupgenius.com/go/4090445ada82caafa7-frozen1>
Concessions <https://www.signupgenius.com/go/4090445ada82caafa7-frozen3>
Cast Party <https://www.signupgenius.com/go/4090445ada82caafa7-frozen>

There will be a sign-up for dress rehearsals as well, but they are currently set up incorrectly, so that will come out in an email once it is correct.

To make the nights easier during tech week, we will have dinners available at each dress rehearsal. Sign-ups for this can be found here: <https://thehcpac.org/rehearsal-dinners-signup/>.

Since several students forgot last weekend, each child was asked to bring their own makeup for tech week. (This was asked of them in rehearsal; I admit that I should have notified parents separately, but I didn't think of it.) They should have foundation one shade darker than their actual skin tone (stage lights are very bright) and eyeliner. If they will not be putting on their own eyeliner, our volunteers have requested they bring liquid eyeliner, as that is easier to put onto another person.

I hope you all enjoy this Thanksgiving holiday and the time off. After that, we've got one busy week, and the show will go up. Thank you for all you've done.

Sincerely,

Schreiber
